A Development in Salicylate Therapy

'ALASIL' presents the beneficial therapeutic effects of acetylsalicylic acid in such a form that it is readily acceptable even to patients with finely balanced digestive systems. This high tolerability is due to the fact that 'Alasil' combines acetylsalicylic acid with Dibasic Calcium Phosphate and 'Alocol' (Colloidal Aluminium Hydroxide), an effective gastric sedative and antacid.

For this reason 'Alasil' can be administered with confidence in all the conditions in which such an agent is indicated, while its use affords the advantage of greater freedom from the possibility of unpleasant gastro-intestinal sequelae.

'Alasil' is therefore an analgesic, antipyretic and antirheumatic which can be prescribed for patients of all ages. Moreover, it is so well tolerated that its use can be pushed or prolonged to the desired extent.

MOUNT THE HEALTH GUARD

No hospital, store or institution where large staffs are employed is really in line with the times if proper means of rubbish disposal are lacking. Apart from the direct danger to health of both patients and staff, untidiness breeds inefficiency and is often objectionable. Sugg gas incinerators are designed to take care of this problem at source. Stationed at strategic points in a building they consume all rubbish quickly and without trace by merely opening the door and dropping it in. Action is automatic and certain. A cut off device prevents gas from being wasted. Easy and inexpensive to install. Need practically no maintenance or attention.

JOURNAL OF THE ROYAL COLLEGE OF NURSING

Nursing Times

VOL. XLIII. No. 13 SATURDAY, APRIL 12, 1947

EDITOR: MISS K. F. ARMSTRONG, S.R.N., S.C.M., DIPLOMA IN NURSING, LONDON UNIVERSITY

A Liberal Education

THIS week we publish a full report of the College Conference on a University Degree in Nursing, which took place at Headquarters on Wednesday, March 12; it was disappointing only from the point of view of the fact that other business of national importance kept some of the speakers from attending, and left the platform entirely to the nursing profession. The speakers who could not be present included educational experts, Mr. Kenneth Lindsay, M.P., who was Parliamentary Secretary to the Board (now the Ministry) of Education under the Coalition Government, and Sir Cyril Norwood, President of St. John's College, Oxford. These speakers would have made very valuable contributions to the discussion, we feel sure, and we are glad that Sir Cyril Norwood is chairman to the Advisory Board on Nursing Education of the Royal College of Nursing, so that his views and guidance will still be available to help the profession.

The nurses rose admirably to the occasion; Miss M. Houghton, Diploma in Nursing, University of London, leader, and Miss J. Cunningham, B.A., S.R.N., Miss M. Farnworth, Diploma in Nursing, University of London, who is now taking a degree course in psychology, and Miss M. Macnaughton, R.G.N., who also holds the London Diploma in Nursing, spoke very well. All these nurses, we feel, convinced their hearers by what they said that there was reason behind their ideas. The few medical men in the audience (who were, of course, men particularly interested in the question), nodded their heads in support of many of the points the speakers made. The ease with which they spoke and the manner in which they held the audience showed that their post-certificate and undergraduate education had a definite value to the profession that they represented. They certainly proved the point that no knowledge acquired by a nurse, either before or during her training, even though it be knowledge not connected directly with the nursing curriculum, will be wasted. There are so many openings, there is so much scope in the profession, that all education, whether it is strictly vocational or general, can be used to the full.

What a good example we shall have of this in the next six weeks! Two hundred and twenty British nurses will be crossing the Atlantic by boat or plane to join with nurses from all parts of the world in discussing nursing and health problems. What contribution will they make? How many will be able to talk to their European colleagues in their own tongue, or at least, to understand them when they contribute to the discussions (a kindly Council provides those who attend with a translation of the prepared speeches—though how much more exhilarating it is to follow the spoken word oneself.)

How broad will our colleagues find our education to be in other ways? Will they find our ideas flexible, our concepts adaptable: fluidity of thought is a sign of a liberal education—whether that education has come from the University or from our experiences during a full life. Will they find us knowledgeable not only about our own work, but about nursing and the Health Services as a whole, about our new National Health Act, our Divisions of Nursing at the various Ministries, about nursing legislation and our own national nursing organizations? We hope that they will find the British contribution second to none, not only in the conference room, but also in the individual contacts which are just as valuable a part of the visit.

A CURSE OR A CHARM?

A SHORT time ago Dr. Mary Stocks wrote to the Times suggesting that the nurse's cap was unsuitable for 'a member of a highly skilled and exacting profession' and asking why we should be required to dress up as a Victorian domestic servant?' We remarked at the time that we did not think that the average nurse felt that it was a hardship to be asked to wear a cap and discussed the suggestion which arose from subsequent correspondence that the wearing of a cap was

NEWS FROM NORTHERN IRELAND

The Belfast Branch is holding a sale of work in aid of the funds of the Royal College of Nursing in Northern Ireland on Wednesday April 30. The Marchioness of Hamilton will open the sale at 2.30 p.m. Enjoy yourselves, support the College and meet old friends a deterrent in recruitment. Now Miss Monica Dickens has brought the matter up again in the Woman's Own Journal : she says of the cap, "charming, grant you, when perched behind a froth of curls and a wide smile. Not so charming when pulled forward over an earnest, shining face. But whichever way you wear it, you curse it, if you are a nurse, for the trouble it gives you." Well, of course, all caps do not give the nurse trouble—she is referring to the type that has to be gathered up and "coaxed into pleats and frills." But even if they did give trouble this fact alone would not matter to the woman who cares about her appearance. How much time and trouble young women, nowadays, take in setting and arranging their hair, in powdering their faces and making their clothes as becoming as coupons and costs make possible! The eternally feminine instinct makes these things no trouble at all provided the result pleases.

However we were challenged recently by a nurse who felt that we were wrong in stating that the young nurses, on the whole, were proud of their caps and were not in agreement with either Dr. Mary Stocks or Miss Dickens in this matter. We have therefore made further enquiries and have not found that young nurses think it disagreeable to wear a cap or want to do without it. In fact their response to the suggestion that they should not have caps has been one of complete surprize that anyone should put such a question to them. Their reaction when they realized that they were expected to take the matter seriously has been in every case the same: "I should not feel I was in nursing uniform if I had no cap on": "I should hate to go on duty without some sort of cap": "The patients would not have the same confidence in us if we did not wear our fresh white caps and aprons": that has been the tenor of every reply.

It is interesting in this connection to note two things. In the States and Canada where nursing has developed on more professional lines, where the nurse often has a college education and is more widely treated as a colleague and member of the health team by the doctor and administrator, in no case that we know of has the university or other school of nursing designed a nursing uniform which does not include a smart white cap and either a white overall or apron. And how attractive the average young woman looks in a neat uniform, if she take the trouble to wear it well and has a very natural pride in her appearance. In the second place, not infrequently, when student and other nurses are invited to go to speak to groups of girls interested in nursing they are often asked to wear uniform because the young people like it.

Of course in the war many nurses had to give up white caps and aprons, sometimes because they showed up and served as bombing targets, more often because of the impossibility of laundering and keeping them clean. However, talking the matter over with a nurse of the younger generation who had had experience of work both with and without the traditional cap in the Services, she said that she had no desire to give up her cap, and felt that psychologically it would be a mistake as the public associated nursing with the traditional uniform and would not have the same confidence in a nurse who did not wear it. In support of this she stated that the wounded men when they reached the care of trained nurses in uniform, although they had previously been in the care of equally experienced nurses in battle dress and overalls nearer the firing lines, were convinced that they had merely had care from A.T.S. personnel and "no proper nursing previously" because the uniform had been missing! If it is really the opinion of nurses that it would be better to dispense with caps, of course this point of view would gradually change. What matters, though, is whether nurses want to get rid of caps: not whether persons who are not nurses want them abolished. We hope our readers will let us know what they think.

Topical Notes

Policy and Population

THE Registrar General for England and Wales has announced the highest birth rate recorded in any December quarter since 1921, the rate being 20.5 per 1,000 of the total population. In addition, the deaths of children under 1 for this quarter, were 44 per 1,000 related live births, which is 7 per 1,000 below the average rate for the corresponding quarters for 10 years. The "natural increase" of population, i.e., the excess of births over deaths, for the quarter was 99,718. The birth rate for the whole of 1946 was 19.1 per 1,000, the highest recorded since 1923, and the infant mortality was 43 per 1,000, the lowest ever recorded in this country, and comparing most favourably with the 60 per 1,000 in 1941. These figures will be most encouraging to all nurses and especially to health visitors and midwives; they show that the policy of giving priority to the health and welfare of mothers and their babies has had good results at a time when the effect of six years of war-time restrictions and difficulties might have shown a very different result.

Bequests to Hospitals

THE British Hospitals Association has issued a statement about the effect of the National Health Service Act on bequests to hospitals. "Whilst it is true that moneys given to non-teaching hospitals prior to the passing of the Act will, on the appointed day, be put into a national pool and redistributed," states the memorandum, "it is important to note that this does not apply to gifts made between November 6, 1946 and the appointed day, provided that such gifts are made upon trusts which (in accordance with section 7 of the Act) provide either 'for the administration of the property (i.e. gifts) as a capital fund separate from the general funds of the Hospital,' or 'for the application of the property for some specific object distinct from the general purposes of the Hospital and involving expenditure of a capital nature," such as erecting or equipping premises for research or in naming a bed in memory of a deceased relative or friend. It should be remembered that the need for charity does not cease because the State is taking over the hospitals. ## A Dilemma to Face

We are glad to make known that Walthamstow Town Council have withdrawn the resolution passed last year by which doctors and nurses in their employ must be members of a trade union or recognized association; they explain their action as being due to the views expressed by the Minister of Health on the matter. We wonder what effect their resolution had had on the recruitment and retaining of medical and nursing staff. Nurses who are already on the staff of a Council which passes such a resolution, even if it only applies to members who join in the future, are in a difficult position, as, by staying in the Council's employment, they are actually supporting a principle of which they may not approve.

Applying Nurses Act, 1943

We publish on another page a report of the case in which Mr. L. Miller, of the London and District Nursing Association (a private nurses' employment agency) has won his action against the fixing of salary scales by the London County Council as a condition of granting him a licence under the Nurses' Act, 1943 (Clause 8, sub-section 2). The Act gives the licensing authority the right to grant a licence subject to "such conditions as they think fit for securing the proper conduct of the agency, including conditions as to the fees to be charged by the person carrying on the agency, whether to the nurse or other persons supplied, or to the persons to whom they are supplied." The London County Council, like other local authorities, had interpreted this clause as giving them the right to fix salary scales for both the State-registered nurse and the enrolled assistant nurse, the fees varying, we understand, according to whether the nurse is genuinely engaged in private nursing or is doing general duty in a hospital or institution as a temporary member of the staff.

No Ceiling but Fairness

The Royal College of Nursing is anxious that there shall be no "ceiling" of salaries for the nursing profession, but that there shall be a certain measure of uniformity of salaries, so that nurses are paid fairly according to their qualifications and experience. How licensing authorities are to carry out their duties in this matter is a difficult problem: either they must enquire of every agency the fees that it charges and determine whether they are "proper," or lay down a scale with maximal and minimal limits. There may be an appeal by the London County Council, which is trying to protect both the public interest and the nurse, and the profession will watch it with interest. In hospitals, the Rushcliffe scales of salaries are widely applied; individual employers may exceed them but do not get Government financial help for any additional salary paid.

Affecting Scottish Nurses

Two alterations have now been published by the Department of Health for Scotland which are to come into force before the further Report of the Wheatley Committee is published. The weekly allowance payable to nurses while on annual leave, or on sick leave, during which time they cannot be provided with in-patient treatment, is to be increased from 15s. to 20s. a week as from April 1, 1947. The earlier figure was fixed when the cost of living was very much lower than at present so the revision is opportune: no increase has yet been announced by the Rushcliffe Committee. Also, the salary scale for staff nurses in tuberculosis hospitals and sanatoria, or in tuberculosis wards in other hospitals, who hold the certificate of the Tuberculosis Association only and are not general trained nurses, has been revised. The new scale is to take effect from November 1, 1946, and will increase from £115 by £10 annually for four years, and subsequently by further increases to £185 after twenty years' service; emoluments are valued at £100. This revision was made necessary by the increase in the salaries of enrolled assistant nurses on November 1, 1946.

Congress Programme

"The International Nursing Bulletin" for February, 1947, has just reached us and contains the full programme of the Ninth Quadrennial Congress of the International Council of Nurses to be held in Atlantic City, May 11-17, 1947. The Grand Council meetings for the Board of Directors take place the preceding week in Washington and delegates have received a gracious invitation from Mrs. Harry S. Truman to a reception at the White House on May 7. The representatives of Great Britain who will be there are Miss D. Bridges (President), Miss C. H. Alexander, Miss G. E. Davies, Miss G. V. Hillyers, O.B.E., and Miss D. M. Smith, O.B.E., the Bulletin also sets out the various courses open to nurses attending the congress (see the Nursing Times, March 8, page 160). There is good fare for the minds of all sections of the profession.

Scottish Health Bill

When Parliament re-assembles after the Easter recess, the House of Commons will take the final stages of the National Health Service (Scotland) Bill. A number of alterations were made in committee, one interesting point being that the chairman of the appellate tribunal is now to be appointed by the Lord President of the Court of Session, instead of by the Secretary of State. Mr. Reid moved an important amendment designed to make sure that no one employed in the service, including, of course, nurses, should be compelled to join a union. The Secretary of State opposed this amendment and it was defeated by 11 votes to 25. Mr. Westwood pointed out that he had already sent a circular to individual local authorities in Scotland saying they should not decide by unilateral action that doctors, nurses and members of similar professions should be compelled to join a trade union or similar organization.

EARLY AMBULATION AND OTHER MODERN METHODS IN SURGICAL CARE

By RALPH H. GARDINER, M.A., D.M., M.Ch. (Oxon.), F.R.C.S. (Eng.)., F.R.C.S. (Ed.) Surgeon, Royal Buckinghamshire Hospital, Aylesbury; Tindal General Hospital, Aylesbury, etcetera

Photographed in Tindal General Hospital. Right.—a patient of the Royal Buckinghamshire Hospital, walking in the ward on the sixth post-operative day. She was 37 years old and had had Hartmann's operation for an advanced carcinoma of the pelvirectal junction involving the uterus, which was also removed*

WALKING EARLY

"Freedom of the bed is the right of every patient who has had an operation, notwithstanding a possible reluctance of the nursing staff to give up the old established backrest, and their aversion to the natural resting position—the horizontal." (Lancet, 1946, vol. 2, p. 910.)

OLD methods of medical or surgical treatment tend to die a lingering death, and much that was taught as correct in the past is handed on and copied from textbook to textbook, with a result that new methods take long to establish or become popular. This is nowhere more true than in surgical care, and although what is new must always be given a most careful trial, when once its value is established there should be no hesitancy in its adoption if it is for the well-being of our patients.

It will be my object in this article to describe some of the recent advances in the management of the surgical case, which have come into practice in the past few years.

A surgeon is dependent on the nursing staff under his guidance to prepare the patient for operation, and to return the patient to full health and vigour as rapidly as possible after the operation. At the same time every care must be taken to avoid post-operative complications which sometimes lead to disastrous consequences. Team work is essential, and all concerned, from the surgeon to the most junior probationer, have their vital parts to play.

Pre-Operative Preparation

When a patient is admitted to hospital for a "cold" operation, a variable length of time, possibly days, may be spent on preparation. The preparation will be partly general in nature, such as attention to the mouth and teeth, the taking of body fluids for pathological investigation, and X-rays. In addition, special preparation may be ordered as stomach or bowel washouts and blood transfusions. The patient during this time, unless very ill, should not be confined to bed. If he is fit enough, allow plenty of exercise and freedom, with visits to the cinema or shopping expeditions, and, weather permitting outings in the hospital grounds. Opportunity is taken at the same time for the physiotherapist to teach deep breathing by special exercises, which will become a normal part of the post-operative routine so important to help to avoid the too-common post-operative chest complications.

The patient's habits and even vices should be studied. He or she may have their own pet aperient or sleeping tablet, and provided the surgeon agrees, these may be continued in hospital. If smoking and alcohol are also part of the patient's life, they should not be suddenly restricted or eliminated. Many an old man is miserable without his pipe. Then there is the old and vexed question of the daily bowel action. Unless there is a special reason to "springclean" the colon (as for a resection), do not do it. Not only is an enema distasteful, and violent purgatives the cause of much discomfort, but they may actually lead to serious post-operative trouble, as it has recently been shown that the pre-operative enema may be a contributory cause of post-operative ileus and distension (Devine, British Journal of Surgery, 1947). Let the patient, if it is his habit, take his own aperient and as far as possible use a lavatory and not the bedpan.

Diet

Diet, also, is of great importance. The war has taught us that patients who have been starved or under-nourished for any length of time do not recover nearly so quickly from wounds or operation. Starvation or under-nourishment means a lack of the "essential" body proteins so necessary for the repair of a wound, vitamin deficiency, and also a general lack of bodily resistance. Nowadays, care is taken to see that these deficiencies are rectified before the operation. A high calorie, high protein, but easily digestible diet should be ordered. Vitamins are essential, but in particular vitamins C and K. Vitamin C is now known to play an essential part in sound wound healing, and vitamin K in blood clotting, thus helping to avoid a severe or reactionary haemorrhage. It is my practice to order a full vitamin complement, with extra vitamin C and vitamin K, to all patients about to undergo a major surgical procedure. Protein lack and a poor haemoglobin concentration in the blood should be combatted with suitable transfusions of compatible blood and plasma.

An operation is an ordeal and the anxious time of waiting and preparation can be made to pass much more easily and smoothly if small details receive attention.

When the patient has come round from the anaesthetic, do not sit him bolt upright, with a backrest and a bed "donkey" to help maintain a most unnatural position, which no one normally adopts. Let the patient lie or recline on pillows in the position in which he finds the greatest ease and rest. This is generally practically recumbent. Fowler's position, used for so many years, seems now to be passing, and gone are the days of bed "donkeys" and knee pillows. If the patient is free to move in bed unhampered, as he wishes, some muscular movement will take place, and complete stagnation of blood in the veins be avoided. The return of blood from the veins to the heart is largely dependent on muscular contraction which squeezes the blood back to the great veins and heart. Stagnation of blood in kinked veins or veins narrowed by compression, together with a sluggish circulation may mean the onset of the dreaded post-operative thrombosis and a possible pulmonary embolism. We now know that thrombosis after operation begins in the majority of cases in the veins of the calf and spreads upwards. The free flow of blood from the limbs is also assisted by the physiotherapist, who should put the patient through a full range of muscular movement the morning after operation and continue to do so daily during the patient's stay in hospital, and this is possible in all but those very critically ill.

Encourage the patient to cough and breathe deeply as soon as he can respond after the anaesthetic. This will be resented as it generally causes severe pain in the wound, especially after "upper abdominals," but it is very important as by so doing plugs of mucous and bronchial secretions are removed from the air passages, which may be a fertile source of post-operative pneumonia and collapse of a lung. Inhalations of carbon dioxide and breathing exercises should be given daily and greatly assist in lung expansion. Tell the patient when he coughs to clasp a hand over the site of the wound to act as a support, which will greatly ease the pain. See that the post-operative dressings are comfortably adjusted, light, and are the minimum required to cover the wound and splint the skin around. This latter is best done with Elastoplast or other adhesive dressings. Elaborate bandages, spicas, and pressure dressings, are things of the past, and it is no longer necessary to truss the patient up like a dressed fowl!

Getting the Patient Up

On the first day after operation, in the evening when the bed is made and provided his condition permits, allow him to move down or to sit on the end of the bed. On the second night, he should get up and sit in a chair, and may also stand. Walking is allowed on the third or fourth day. By the fifth day or earlier, if all has been straightforward, the patient should be able to walk in the ward on his own, irrespective of the nature or magnitude of the operation. The photographs will show that this actually takes place ; it is against all the old teachings. Twenty to thirty years ago, patients after a simple appendicectomy lay in bed on their backs for three weeks, swathed in voluminous bandages. Now, provided all goes well, I expect my appendicectomies to leave hospital walking on the ninth or tenth post-operative day, and a straightforward gastrectomy on the twelfth.

Surgeons are adopting early ambulation after operation for the following reasons. The patient's limb muscles must move and contract and therefore do not become flabby. At the same time, the circulation of the blood is encouraged for the reasons stated and breathing is deeper. The avoidance of prolonged and undue pressure on bony points, and of the skin overlying these, will mean that we have another means of the avoidance of bed sores which still may occur, however good and careful is the nursing attention. Muscular cramps, joint pains and backache, often all the result of one position constantly maintained, are relieved. The dull monotony of bed is broken, and sleep at nights helped. Serious post-operative complications—such as post-operative pneumonia and pulmonary embolus—are being actively combatted by natural means. Furthermore, the patient leaves hospital feeling far stronger and fitter than if he had spent a full 10-14 days in bed. A saving in hospital beds in these difficult times is also effected.

Persuading the Patient

To get the patient up early needs courage on his part and by his attendants. It is all against his better judgment and natural instinct, which is to lie still and protect himself. He also comes into hospital imbued with the idea that an operation will mean long and enforced recumbency, and that muscular movement will mean throwing a "strain" on the wound with a possible weakening or even its disruption. Therefore the nurse must encourage and teach the patient to move; the success of this form of treatment depends on her, especially in those who enjoy illness and who have made up their minds to "make the most of their illness." Early ambulation is particularly important in the aged. Old people do not as a rule take kindly to their beds for a long period and are very apt to give up and die if allowed to lie recumbent for even a short period. The circulatory system and muscular power are poorer also in the old, which means that post-operative pneumonia, thrombosis, and all the evils of a poor circulation will be more common. I have found also that old folk generally prefer to recline in a comfortable chair than lie in bed.

I like to see my second stage prostatectomies, who are usually quite old men, sitting comfortably round a ward fire on the second or third post-operative day, with the tubes from their Hamilton

Above: a 46 years old patient in Tindal General Hospital, sitting in the ward on the second post-operative day. He has had a high partial gastrectomy for lesser curve gastric ulcer. (Note the Ryle's tube still in situ. Intermittent gastric suction is employed as a routine for 48 hours after operation)

Irving boxes led into urine bottles under their chairs. The presence of an intravenous drip saline is not a bar to early ambulation—it can quite easily be adjusted on a stand nearby or even carried by the patients while they walk. This is the usual practice after abdomino-perineal operations in one well-known London hospital. Early ambulation will mean a smoother, quicker convalescence—and it certainly materially helps us to avoid the grave complications of post-operative pneumonia and pulmonary embolus, which may cost the patient his life. To the patients, it may seem callous and heartless, but, as it is for their ultimate good, there need be no hesitation in carrying it out.

No Serious Complications

All my cases are treated on these lines, and I am even adopting a similar procedure for herniotomies, as the risk of recurrence due to early strain on the operative repair does not appear to be of significance, as "follow-up" records show. I do not use any special method of stitching or of suture material, although some surgeons do employ wire or other strong non-absorbable material. It does not appear to be necessary and I have not found that a weaker scar or that post-operative hernia occurs as a result, and cases have been followed up for three or four years now. I still close any wound with No. 2 chromicized gut, and the skin with tension sutures and clips. Deep tension sutures I rarely, if ever, employ. Accurate haemostasis of all bleeding points, however, is essential.

I do not lay claim to anything original in this paper, as the methods I have described have been in use in this country and in the United States of America for some time past and are steadily becoming more popular.

So far, I have had no serious complications from early ambulation and have only seen good come from it for the patients. They leave hospital feeling stronger and with muscles in good fettle, and I can heartily recommend the use of early ambulation after operation as a sound procedure which will be of lasting benefit to our patients and an integral part of the post-operative regime.

Looking Ahead

The Lancet has recently had an interesting series of articles on "Health Centres of Tomorrow." One interesting proposal was that there should be two varieties, an ideal type based on a teaching hospital with a full range of facilities, including X-ray and clinical laboratory, and a second of a simpler nature dependant on the neighbouring hospitals for X-ray and pathological examinations, as well as for consultant help. Some correspondents have criticized the suggestion of a clinical laboratory, though there seems little doubt that a keen team of practitioners would welcome the opportunity thus offerred.

SERVING TOWN AND COUNTRY

—at Scunthorpe War Memorial Hospital

SCUNTHORPE War Memorial Hospital is young in years as its name implies, for it is a memorial to the fallen of the 1914-1918 war, but, despite its youth, it is a very experienced institution and looks like forging ahead in the future.

In its sixteen years of life it has developed from the original 87 beds to its present complement of 235, and a further 12 or 15 beds are soon expected to be at the disposal of the people of Scunthorpe and the twenty odd surrounding miles of Lincolnshire, which this busy hospital serves. There is an air of enthusiasm and vigour everywhere, and matron, Miss C. Allen, S.R.N., S.C.M., appears untiring in her efforts to keep her hospital "in step," or even a step in advance of what the future is going to demand of her staff.

Open Spaces

The hospital, on the west side of the industrial town of Scunthorpe, stands in 14 acres of grounds, and, judging by the present need for its service, those 14 acres are going to be a blessing to its Committee, for there is ample room for expansion. "When the hospital was built, there was not a house within half a mile of it," matron told me, "but now the suburban houses face on to the front garden." The modern building is attractive, and is three storeys in height, as is the nurses' home, which is built in the grounds.

The wards look most attractive, for the hospital was entirely re-decorated last year, and the beautifully light coloured walls, and large windows make the wards bright and cheerful places for the treatment of sick people. The main wards have 24 beds, and there are additional rooms for three or for four patients adjoining the main ward. These small wards are used for any patient whom the medical staff feels is in need of the privacy of a smaller ward. Annexes are well equipped, and the care of the patient is obviously the first consideration everywhere. One ward has just been opened after a lapse of seven years, and has been allotted as a men's medical ward; the future plans include a new children's ward (the present one has 23 beds), and it seems a women's medical ward will follow as a matter of course.

A Progressive Year

Without a doubt, 1943 was a big year for Scunthorpe Hospital, for that was when their really fine new out-patients, radio-therapy and private patients' wing was opened. The out-patient department is certainly an efficient, extremely well-equipped part of the hospital, the waiting hall has attractive modern chairs for the patients, a point many hospitals might do well to copy, as so often uncomfortable, and anything but restful, forms are considered all that is necessary in this part of the institution, where many patients often spend very long spells, sometimes feeling ill as well as being fraught with many anxieties. "We felt we wanted to make the patients as comfortable as we possibly could, so these chairs were one step in that direction," matron said smilingly, when we commented on the unusual sight. "So often the Out-Patients' Department and the Casualty Department are the patient's first introduction to hospital, and much of their peace of mind, and therefore possibly their recovery is influenced by their first reception." We could not have agreed with this sentiment more. The "appointment" system has been in operation at Scunthorpe during the past year, and it is found to be working excellently. Every department is well equipped for its own particular sphere of service, and what was so especially nice, was that each member of the staff we met realised their department is well equipped. There was no thinly veiled envy of anybody else's superior apparatus; everybody said how adequately they were supplied with the things necessary to their efficiency.

The radio-therapy department is well known to be one of the most modern. It serves the whole of Lincolnshire. Its appliances are the most up-to-date, and the two wards allotted to in-patients needing radium treatment are divided into 20 beds for men and 24 for women, in addition to eight for private patients. It has its own fine theatre, and one felt that here was a complete block, with special staff, giving every possible chance of recovery to patients needing deep X-ray therapy and radium.

The private patients' wing is a pleasant place. The rooms are comfortable with basins in each room and big, modern windows. Everything is done to make the nursing as easy as possible ; all cupboards are built-in, there is the bell-light system, and ample linen and annexe rooms.

There are three theatres at present in use in the hospital and a fourth is in the course of building, in what was once the original out-patient department. Everything of the latest is being installed, and judging by the other new departments, one can be confident that a really fine theatre unit will result. A new ward for "tonsils and adenoids" patients is being opened.

On and Off Duty

Scunthorpe Hospital has been a training school for the last nine years, but their first preliminary training school had only been functioning a few days when we called. It is housed in the nurses' home, and is of eight weeks' duration. Nurses may start at 17½ years of age, though matron prefers them to be 18, and a four-years' training is given. A 48-hour week is in operation, and day nurses have four hours off duty daily, one day off per week from 5 p.m. the previous day, and may sleep away two nights. Night nurses have two nights off a week. Ward orderlies contribute much to the relieving of nurses from domestic duties, and matron meets her sisters, nurses and domestic staff on separate occasions regularly to discuss any problems or grievances that have arisen or may arise.

It is obvious that the maximum care of the patient is first priority, and much thought is given to the comfort and well-being of the staff. One feels that if Scunthorpe people get really acquainted with their hospital the necessary additional student nurses required for the various new departments opening shortly should be readily found, for as the War Memorial Hospital is proud and glad to serve Scunthorpe and district, the young girls who wish to become nurses should be equally proud and glad to train in their own capable hospital.

ELEMENTARY ANATOMY, PHYSIOLOGY AND HYGIENE

QUESTION 5.—Describe the spinal cord. What are its functions ?

The spinal cord is a cylinder of nervous tissue about 18 inches in length and about the thickness of the little finger : the thickness, however, varies, the cord being stouter in the cervical and lumbar regions where the nerve supply to the upper and lower limbs is derived. The cord is cleft deeply down both the front and back surface, the fissures dividing the cord almost in half. In the centre there is a very fine canal, about the size of an ordinary sewing needle. The cord ends in the adult at the level of the first to the second lumbar vertebra where it divides into a bunch of nerves called the cauda equina.

The cord consists of both white matter or nerve fibres on the outside, and grey matter or nerve cells in the centre. The white matter is made up of motor and sensory fibres. The motor fibres run down the cord from the motor centres in the brain to the motor cells in the cord. These fibres cross in the medulla oblongata for the most part, and run with fibres which have the same function, forming tracts, mainly in the lateral and anterior parts of the cord. The sensory fibres run from the sensory cells in the grey matter of the cord up the cord to sensory relay stations in the brain stem at the base of the brain. They also run in tracts according to function, and are for the most part in the posterior and anterior parts of the cord. There are also connector fibres running between the sensory neurons and the motor neurons of the cord.

The grey matter is roughly, on transverse section, butterfly or "H"-shaped, having two projections which jut forwards and two projections which jut backwards. The anterior projections are called the anterior horns, or cornua, and consist of motor cells. The motor cells give off motor fibres, which run out from the cord, and form the motor fibres of the 31 pairs of spinal nerves. The posterior projections are called the posterior horns, or cornua. These consist of sensory cells which give off sensory fibres that run up the cord and carry sensory stimuli to the brain. The endings of the sensory fibres of the spinal nerves which arise in the receptors of the skin and other tissues, enter the posterior horns and terminate among the sensory cells there. These endings are very freely branching and widely distributed.

The chief functions of the spinal cord are :—(1) to relay motor stimuli from the motor centres of the brain to the muscles of the trunk and limbs, through the motor tracts and the motor neurons of the spinal nerves; (2) to relay sensory stimuli from the receptors or nerve-endings in the skin and other tissues to the sensory nerve centres (3) to produce reflex action through the transmission of stimuli to the motor cells in the cord from the sensory neurons which bring in the stimuli from the tissues; this transmission occurs in the cord but is subject to inhibition by the higher mental centres of the brain; (4) the nerve supply also controls the nutrition of the tissues, which suffers if the cord is cut.

Book Reviews

AIDS TO MEDICAL NURSING.—By Margaret Hitch, S.R.N.: Third Edition, (Bailliere, Tindal & Cox, 7 and 8, Henrietta Street, W.C.2.; Price 5s.)

This very useful and well known member of the Aids Series has been revised and brought up to date. The detailed nursing care required by medical cases is described and it is good that the book has reverted to its first title of "Aids to Medical Nursing" and so retains its character. Text books of medicine are numerous but this little book fulfils a different function for the nurse. At the moment, it is not very clear to what extent the metric system is replacing the apothecaries' system of weights and measures in the prescribing of drugs, but it would doubtless be helpful if in another edition the doses were given in the former as well as the latter.

MICROBIOLOGY FOR NURSES.—By Mary E. Morse, M.D., and M. Frobisher, S.B., S'c.D., F.A.P.H.A., F.A.A.A.S. (Seventh Edition, W. B. Saunders Company, 7, Grape Street, London; price 15s.)

This comprehensive text book lays special emphasis on the nursing of conditions caused by bacteria and other parasites. This seventh edition is brought up-to-date. There are good chapters on bacteria at work in all departments of life, and the nurse will find it helpful in applying her knowledge of bacteriology to her practical everyday work, domestic, culinary and nursing.

A University Degree in Nursing—

Session 5 of a Royal College of Nursing Conference on "The Nation's Nurses"

MISS G. V. Hillyers, O.B.E., S.R.N., President of the Royal College of Nursing, introduced the speakers at the evening conference on Wednesday, March 12, on a "University Degree in Nursing," and asked the members to be both critical and constructive in their attitude to this important subject. Miss Houghton, M.B.E., sister tutor, University College Hospital, acted as leader and said that members would regret the absence of Miss Brackett, R.N. Rockefeller Foundation, who was unfortunately still on the high seas, and of Sir Cyril Norwood, late President of St. John's College, Oxford, who was unable to be present. "We must consider," said Miss Houghton, "what the College Council has in mind with regard to a University degree." It was no new idea, the Horder Reconstruction Committee had asked for it, and we must now consider the reasons for demanding this level of qualification. All would agree that there was a need for women with the best possible education for their particular work in the organization of schools of nursing and in the public health services.

"Devoted but Narrow?"

Miss Houghton said that the broad outlook gained from such an education would be invaluable and we must live down the label of being "devoted but narrow." We must offer also equality in status with other social workers. That a university degree was not required to enable a nurse to wash a sick person and make him comfortable was an easy criticism to make, but nursing now included such a wide field, ranging from the simple art of domestic care to that entailing great responsibilities of planning and organization. Miss Houghton said that workers must be selected and even their basic preparation should be different. On the other hand safeguards were needed. There must be no lowering of the University standard of education. We were not asking for University recognition as a label, but to prepare really good people for a really good job. Miss Houghton then introduced the first of the team of speakers, Miss P. J. Cunningham, B.A., S.R.N., health visitor.

Too Early Specialization

"I would like to make a plea for wider education before specialization," said Miss Cunningham. "The love of speed typifies our age, so we rush into specialized careers before we have seen their position in the world in which we live. I took a university degree in languages without making any immediate use of it, and I have never regretted it. When I decided to go to hospital after the university my friends looked a little askance," Miss Cunningham remarked. Some thought her simple-minded, others asked her if she realized the salary she would receive as a nurse in comparison with that she could have obtained in a post at an Embassy abroad; another warned her that she had to be terribly strong and her life would be like "living shut up in a box." The body which had granted Miss Cunningham the scholarship said all her training had been wasted, but, said Miss Cunningham, "I believed that it would not be in the end, and I still believe that any education in music, art or any subject not bearing directly upon nursing, should in the end make the nurse understand more sorts of people and be more tolerant. One comes to recognize the fact that many people are different from oneself. People who do not conform to the usual pattern may be very interesting persons."

Miss Cunningham continued, "It was certainly difficult at first in hospital having lived for three years in a world of mediaeval French, Proust and Stendhal; I found I was slow at the practical things, and was inclined to think things out, instead of just doing them straight away without thinking about them (laughter), and I was often very tired, perhaps more so than those who were used to practical things."

Scope for Ability

"Nursing cannot be a success or have new life unless it ceases to be a closed community," said Miss Cunningham. "Every nurse who brings to nursing some real knowledge of some outside subject, be it photography or horse training, brings with her something to widen the family circle. Nursing needs more interesting people, but, if it is to attract them and not be a profession reserved for the "fool of the family," there must be more scope for ability after training. Nursing has failed to satisfy the nation's need for nurses because it has hitherto been a narrow profession and has not shown sufficient opportunity for nurses with wide interests. Many women have become doctors who would perhaps have made better nurses, simply because they had a wider life, with more freedom and opportunities both from the financial and interest point of view.

"Women have always excelled in social work. In public health there is an unparalleled field for rebuilding family life and tackling many of the social problems. The health visitor has a marvellous insight into countless different homes and ways of living. But she needs stimulating by more opportunities for research.

"Nursing needs people in it who are interested in all manners of kinds of life. The shortage of nurses has only become a popular slogan because the man in the street finds that there is no bed for him in hospital. It is of personal interest to himself and his family. Now is the time, whilst there is a national awareness, to stimulate the nation to provide a really full career, with real opportunity inside and outside hospital, after training. Nursing should be a career into which parents would willingly send their children."

A Hat Shop!

One nurse, known to Miss Cunningham, who had had an art training, and had quick deft fingers, started a hat shop on completing her hospital training. This was a pronounced success! Had the profession offered more scope to her she might have entered the public health field and soothed the tempers of harassed East End mothers instead of disgruntled debutantes of the West End. A nurse's life for her was too narrow and failed to prove as interesting as the hat trade! "I feel," concluded Miss Cunningham, "that nursing ought to offer wide opportunities for organization and originality which might compete with any hat trade! The efficiency of the job must be considered but so must the outlet for initiative of the individual."

Miss Farnworth, S.R.N., Diploma in Nursing, University of London, spoke next and said she felt she was in the nature of a "guinea-pig" as she was now in College, having taken her nursing training and post-certificate qualifications also, and was now studying, not only her subject, but also life in College. Miss Farnworth said how interested she was to find that many of her present fellow students showed a mixture of surprise and envy on learning of her hospital training. The average undergraduate was not afraid of hard work, and the outstanding reasons given for not taking such training themselves were the restrictive discipline of hospital life and the reputation hospitals had of preventing free scope for the individual. There was also, she said, a lack of freedom of contact between the different levels of staff in hospitals.

Miss Farnworth suggested that a University degree course would have a definite value in lessening the antipathy of parents who in many instances definitely objected to their daughters taking up nursing. We must face the fact, however, said Miss Farnworth, that there was snobbery within the profession and a University degree might be considered a qualification for certain administrative posts in hospitals; we must remember also other branches of nursing, such as private nursing and the preparation suitable for it. The financial side should not be a drawback as Government grants would be essential and these would be given on ability and need only, and therefore no class distinction would be caused. Miss Farnworth said that the modern degree of specialization was a pity. The University gave its students both knowledge and the art of learning and finding out, and the student's approach to subjects, which was very different in subjects on the arts side and on the science side. In nursing, said Miss Farnworth, we must have different categories and each nurse must be a specialist in her own field.

What Kind of Prestige?

"Finally," said Miss Farnworth, "it will take time to win a University degree for nurses, meanwhile let us be examining ourselves, and ask ourselves if our prestige is real and personal, or is it based on our position only."

Miss M. Macnaughton, R.G.N., Diploma in Nursing, University of London, matron, Stracathro Hospital, Brechin, was the last speaker and said she fully agreed with all that had been suggested but she would like to emphasize two aspects in particular. First, she asked, should the degree course be an undergraduate course at a purely university type of school, or, should it take the form of a post-certificate course.

The profession was now in such a fluid state that it was a good opportunity to discuss the subject thoroughly. We had a pattern of University nurse training in America; there was no reason for us to copy this, but it was helpful to look at it and consider plans that had already been tried out. "The standard of British nursing," said Miss Macnaughton, "is very high; let us not lose our practical skill for the sake of theory; knowledge must be transmuted into action and we must avoid the tendency to split theory from practice."

The post-certificate type of school, said Miss Macnaughton, would most probably be possible sooner than the undergraduate degree course. We must, therefore, improve 'the tone' of the three years the nurse spends in hospital to attract the numbers of suitable candidates who must enter in this way. "Courtesy, I feel, is not as deeply embedded in the heart of every senior member of the hospital staff, as it should be," concluded Miss Macnaughton; "the only publicity likely to bring new candidates to our hospitals is a good reputation."

Miss Houghton then asked Professor J. M. Mackintosh, M.D., F.R.C.P., F.R.S. (Ed.), of the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine, who was in the audience, if he would like to speak from the University point of view. Professor Mackintosh said that he was most interested in the subject of a university degree for nurses. He had lectured to nurses in many places from England and Scotland to Sweden, Finland and America. First we must ask ourselves "What is the purpose of a university education from the universities' point of view?" Professor Mackintosh said it was to ensure that the student should have an academic and cultural background, and a broad fundamental knowledge rather than specialized knowledge. Above all we must avoid early specialization; a degree for nurses must not be purely in nursing, but should include cultural subjects such as art, philosophy, music, etcetera. Professor Mackintosh said how impressed he had been to find in Denmark that they held winter colleges for their agricultural workers and that the subjects taken were not agricultural but included a study of the arts and philosophy. In America the professor felt there was a tendency to too early specialization.

Secondly, we must ask, what were the nursing educationalists going to offer in shortening their course of hospital work to make a degree course sufficiently attractive both to the University authorities and to the prospective student.

Miss Houghton said it was as well for us to realize early that it would be we who had to change and not the university! (laughter).

DISCUSSION

A most lively debate followed. Dr. J. Whillis, M.D., F.R.C.S., Guy's Hospital and Medical School, said he gave his whole-hearted support to the suggestion of a university degree for nurses, especially for administrators and leaders of the profession. A university degree in some other subject won in open competition would be excellent, but the numbers of students in this category would be few as yet and conditions should be made better for them. Professor Mackintosh urged that the degree be taken before hospital training and, in a widely differing subject. Miss Lawson, Ministry of Health, agreed that the wide educational and cultural background should come first, but Miss Taylor of Guy's Hospital on the other hand felt that the post-certificate course was the only one of value.

Miss Hillyers said what a golden opportunity we now had for planning and it was helpful to examine schemes already in practice. The Canadian University School of Nursing gave a five-year course of training, the nurses taking their practical course in a hospital where other students were taking the ordinary nursing course. In this hospital, Miss Hillyers said, she had been most impressed to find that the nurses taking the University course excelled in the practical nursing.

Practical Suggestions

The question was then raised as to what the nurse educationalists were going to suggest in shortening the hospital course to make it sufficiently attractive both to the university authorities and to the student, though the student must be prepared to spend longer over her training in the end.

Miss Preddy of the Radcliffe Infirmary, Oxford, said that discussions were already going on in some of the women's colleges in provincial universities and in Oxford they had suggested 18 months in hospital as a suitable period. Miss Lawson felt that two years in hospital should be given, while Miss Cunningham thought 18 months would be sufficient for the prospective health visitor but three years would be necessary for the prospective ward sister. Miss Lawson also felt that recognition should be given to previous qualifications in training so that a woman already well qualified need not go through the complete course including the preliminary school, as she had done when already a qualified doctor.

With regard to the financial side it was pointed out that this should not be a drawback, or a cause of class distinction, as grants would be available for those with the ability to profit by this form of education. The feeling of the meeting suggested considerable support in favour of a university degree course and members had plenty of suggestions to take with them for their further consideration.

MEDICAL NOTES

Deaths from Paraldehyde

Recently two cases of accidental death occurred through an overdose of paraldehyde. The Lancet points out (March 15, p. 336) that these, and other cases that have occurred, are due to two closely similar causes. One is confusion between pure paraldehyde and a dilute solution of it, usually known as paraldehyde draught, or haustrus paraldehydi; the second is due to confusion between the drachm and the ounce signs. Both these causes emphasize certain points in the training of nurses. In the first of these, as the Lancet points out, the medical student and the nurse in training often fail to distinguish between a drug and a preparation of a drug. Both of these might loosely call paraldehyde draught by the shorter name, paraldehyde. And some never grow out of this habit. In many cases there may be no actual danger in such a habit, e.g. there is not likely to be any confusion if one were to use the term morphine when a solution of morphine was meant, for the simple reason that only the solution is kept available. But in the case of paraldehyde, there is frequently the pure, colourless, undiluted drug and there is also a dilute solution of it, likewise uncoloured. If the young nurse in training is told to give 1 fluid ounce of paraldehyde, when paradehyde draught is intended, it is easy to see how a mistake may occur. The remedy suggested by the Lancet is that the draught should be made up with a distinctive coloured ingredient, uniform in all hospitals. If that were done the nurse in training would associate the added dark colour with the diluted solution and by contrast, the strong undiluted drug with the absence of colour. It is emphasized that both of these should have the dose clearly stated on the label. Here again great care should be taken, because although paraldehyde is given by the mouth in doses of 60 to 120 minims, larger doses are given rectally. The second point that must be stressed in this connection is the use of the drachm and ounce signs and their confusion. It may not be generally known, but the use of the drachm for 60 minims or 60 grains is not countenanced by the British Pharmacopoeia, because of this danger of confusion from which nurses have fallen into error before now. Nothing can be done about it until it has entirely disappeared from physicians' prescriptions, but its use in the hospital pharmacopoeia should cease and the nurse should be very specially warned of its danger,.

Double Spiral Arrangement of Musculature

"The pull exercised by the circumference of the pelvic basin through the deeper-lying (internal oblique) sheet from the ribs and the transverse processes of the spinal vertebrae of the contralateral side by the superficial (external oblique, quadratus lumborum, external intercostal, levatores costarum and scaleni) layer of muscles is a plane of traction that is being simultaneously exerted upon the transverse processes themselves and once again along the deeper-lying plane of pull by the deep (multifidus-semispinalis) sheet of the sacrospinalis from the spines of the vertebrae and the occiput. Thus in a very real sense the occiput and spines of the vertebrae suspend the body by means of two spiral sheets of muscle encircling the trunk. . . . The whole trunk repeats in its own fashion the muscular story of the intestinal tract and of the heart by becoming enwrapped by spiral coils of muscle which are only prevented by the body framework of the thorax and pelvis from completely emptying its contents when contracted forcibly . . . .

The majority of people, as a result of their single-handedness and their fixed and frequently sedentary occupations, to say nothing of their food and clothing, suffer mild, moderate and even serious grades of permanent postural twist without the condition being recognized by themselves or by their medical advisers. In members of my family and myself the "undoing" of previously unrecognized leftward twists, whether congenital or acquired, has . . . led me to recognize and correlate many facts about the body and its functioning, both as a whole and in parts, which had previously eluded my notice. Amongst these anatomical facts the double spiral arrangement of the voluntary musculature is basic. In ontogeny as in phylogeny, man grows and moves spirally.—From "The Double-Spiral Arrangement of the Voluntary Musculature in the Human Body," by Professor Raymond A. Dart, Dean of the University of Witwatersrand, South Africa, in the Surgeons' Hall Journal, Edinburgh.

Penicillin Lozenges and Sore Tongue

It sometimes happens that after treatment with penicillin lozenges there is an inflammation of the mouth and tongue which passes off when the penicillin treatment is suspended. This does not appear to be due to a toxic action of the penicillin but rather to the penicillin functioning too well. Normally there are present in the mouth large numbers of bacteria, and a copious culture of streptococcal types of low virulence can always be obtained. Some of these streptococci are powerful inhibitors of the growth of many bacteria and they are sensitive to penicillin. When penicillin lozenges are sucked the streptococci disappear, and some of the bacteria insensitive to penicillin can grow out much more readily than before, as the streptococcal inhibition is removed. In a few patients this disturbance of the normal bacterial balance in the mouth results in an inflammation of varying intensity but fortunately it seems to be only in a few. The obvious treatment is to stop the penicillin while the pathological condition gradually subsides.—From Sir Alexander Fleming, F.R.C.P., F.R.C.S., F.R.S., in The Practitioner.

Hearing Aids

Now, with a really efficient and easily worn hearing aid or with surgery it is possible to increase the auditory horizon of all those handicapped by deafness due to uncomplicated otosclerosis and to enable them to re-enter and to enjoy the world of hearing."

"It cannot be too strongly emphasized that as with the deafened adult, so with the child, the fitting of a hearing aid is only part, although often an essential part, of the measures that are needed to develop a complete, well-adjusted, educated personality.—From articles by Terence Cawthorne, F.R.C.S., and W. G. Ewing, M.A., Ph.D., in The Practitioner.

B.—THE FALLOPIAN TUBES

BOTH the conditions shown this week deal with affections of the Fallopian tubes and introduce conditions which most nurses will meet in the ordinary general hospital ward.

Specimen 1.—Ectopic Gestation.—A short-term ectopic pregnancy occupies the left Fallopian tube close to the isthmus and has ruptured to expose fragments of chorion and a 2 months' gestation foetus which is seen presenting through the split. In the fresh state 3½ pints of blood lay in the cavity of the abdomen. The left ovary has been opened to show the related corpus luteum. The endometrium which shows decidual changes could be viewed through the right side of the specimen jar.

History.—Amy R., (36) spinster, bus conductress, had been away from work for a week owing to vague ill health. She fell ill suddenly on the fifth day with violent abdominal pain and vomiting. There was no loss of blood from the vagina and she denied pregnancy. On admission to hospital, she was collapsed and exsanguinated by internal haemorrhage. There was free fluid in the abdomen and tenderness in the left pelvis. Slight bleeding was taking place from the cervix. She died before operation could be undertaken.

Pregnancy in a Fallopian tube usually terminates in six to eight weeks. In some cases small haemorrhages occur around the fertilized ovum, the ovum dies and is converted into a tubal mole. There may be bleeding into the lumen of the tube when the ovum or mole may be expelled through the abdominal ostium of the tube, or, as in the case described, the tube may rupture into the peritoneal cavity with severe haemorrhage. In this last type, immediate operation is necessary and nowadays, with blood transfusion readily available, the prognosis is good.

Specimen 2.—Fallopian Tube—Hydrosalpinx.—In this specimen the uterus is mounted together with the left Fallopian tube seen from behind. The tube is distorted by convolutions resulting from adhesions due to chronic inflammation, and greatly distended. It is, however, translucent, the fluid consisting of thin, watery, mucinoid matter. The right uterine adnexa, now removed, were normal.

History.—Mary D., aged 29, committed suicide by drinking Lysol. She was a prostitute of some ten years' standing who had received treatment at a clinic for venereal diseases at the age of about 20, but not subsequently. There had been no recent medical attention.

Salpingitis is usually due to ascending infection. In young adults it may be tuberculous, carried by the bloodstream. Since the advent of chemotherapy, salpingitis has become much less common, certainly one rarely sees a Fallopian tube as grossly distorted as this one. The organisms are killed before they have time to reach the tubes. In the case of gonococcal infection, the organisms are inside the cervical canal and it is very difficult to destroy them with local applications. Indeed, it is possible that local treatment helps to spread the infection up the genital tract. With the administration of sulphonamides or penicillin the drug is carried by the bloodstream to the infected site and the organisms are destroyed.

Above: Specimen 1.—Ruptured ectopic gestation: Pregnancy has occurred with embedding of the ovum in the Fallopian tube close to the isthmus. At two months, profuse haemorrhage, with rupture of the tube, ended the pregnancy. The corpus luteum is visible on the surface of the ovary. A shows the Fallopian tube; B, the two months' foetus; C, the ovary showing the corpus luteum; and D, the broad ligament

Left: Specimen 2.—Salpingitis: The tube is enflamed and blocked by adhesions, so that it is distended with fluid which is mucinoid in character. A shows the distended Fallopian tube; B the uterus; C the broad ligament

Next week: The Female Reproductory System (continued): C. The Ovaries.

GENERAL NURSING COUNCIL FOR ENGLAND AND WALES

THE General Nursing Council met on March 28, Miss D. M. Smith, O.B.E., taking the chair. Miss Smith reported, with regret, the death of Mrs. Bedford Fenwick on March 13, and mentioned her outstanding efforts for the nursing profession, her pioneer work for State registration, and that she had been a member of the first Council from 1920-22. Council members stood for a moment in silence in token of respect. Miss Smith then welcomed Miss MacManus on her return from the West Indies. She reported that the Minister of Health had sanctioned the subsistence and travelling allowances suggested for inspectors of training schools, and that the case against Sidney Tyler of posing as a State-registered nurse had been proved and he had been fined £5. This was the first case of its kind.

Registration

The Council approved the admission to the General Register of 21 nurses by reciprocity, and of the following, by reciprocity to the Supplementary Parts of the Register: nurses for mental diseases 2, nurses for sick children 3, fever nurses 3, and 8 by examination. The Council also approved admission to the various parts of the Register of 37 other applicants, and the re-inclusion of 369 nurses who had hitherto failed to pay their retention fees and who now wished their names included.

Duplicate certificates of registration were granted to 3 nurses whose original certificates had been lost, on payment of the requisite fee of 10s., and without fee, to 2 nurses whose certificates had been lost through enemy action. Duplicate badges had been issued to 13 nurses whose original badges had been lost, on payment of the required amount.

It was reported that a copy of the Register of Nurses for 1947 had been received from the Nurses' Registration Board for New South Wales.

Reduced Training Time

The Council approved the proposal of the Education and Examination Committee in accordance with a recommendation in a memorandum from the Enrolled Assistant Nurses' Committee that a reduction of six months during the first year of training for admission to the Register be granted to all enrolled assistant nurses provided that the applicants enter for the first preliminary examination to take place following the termination of six months training, failure in either part of the examination will necessitate the completion of the full period of training; and further that the Council's solicitor be asked to provide for this concession in the draft Rules at present before the Minister of Health for approval.

It was agreed to issue to the nursing press a statement regarding the position of training schools which do not at present comply with the requirements of the Council to be brought into effect on May 31, 1947, relating to the minimum daily average occupation of beds and the establishment of preliminary training schools. (See Nursing Times of April 5, page 234).

Affiliated Training Schools

The Council agreed that, as from March 28, 1947, the approval, as an affiliated training school for general nurses, of Bushey and District Hospital, Bushey Heath, be withdrawn without prejudice to the position and rights of nurses already admitted to training under the schemes of affiliation; that the name of Bushey and District Hospital be removed from the list of approved training schools: that the approval of the scheme of affiliation between the West Cornwall Hospital, Penzance, and the Royal Hampshire County Hospital, Winchester be withdrawn without prejudice to the position and rights of nurses already admitted to training under the scheme. The following hospitals were approved as training schools: complete training school for general nurses, Essex County Hospital, Wanstead; affiliated training school for general nurses: St. Nicholas and St. Martin's Orthopaedic Hospital, Pyrford, and Warwick Hospital, Warwick; provisional approval for two years was granted to the following hospitals as complete training schools for male nurses, already being approved as complete training schools for female nurses:—Royal Halifax Infirmary; St. Mary Islington Hospital, London, N.19; Southlands Hospital, Shoreham-on-sea; St. Peter's Hospital, Chertsey; Staffordshire General Infirmary, Stafford; Bolton Royal Infirmary; Blackburn and East Lancs. Infirmary, Blackburn; Royal South Hants and Southampton Hospital, Southampton; Royal Hospital, Sheffield; Royal Infirmary, Sheffield; Preston Hospital, North Shields; Prince of Wales's General Hospital, London, N.15. Council agreed that the one-year whole-time course at Solihull High School for Girls, Warwickshire, be approved for the purposes of part I of the preliminary examination.

The results of the February examinations were announced as follows: Candidates successful in the preliminary examination: parts 1 and 2: 1,751; in part I, 1,166; in part 2, 1,271. In the final examinations: 2,079 passed in the final general examination; 45 in the final examination for male nurses; 37 in mental nursing; 3 in mental deficiency nursing; 16 in sick children's nursing, 189 in fever nursing.

Council approved the following appointments of inspectors of training schools on a temporary basis for a period of one year and for reconsideration at the end of that period:—Miss A. K. Burgess, S.R.N., sister-in-charge, London Hospital Annexe, Brentwood; and as Inspector of training schools for mental nurses and nurses for mental defectives, Miss O. F. Griffith, S.R.N., R.M.N., formerly psychiatric nursing consultant and deputy chief nursing consultant to the U.N.R.R.A. Mission to Greece.

Mental Nursing

The Mental Nursing Committee recommended that all hospitals approved as training schools for nurses for mental diseases or nurses for mental defectives should be granted the same period in which to carry out the Council's requirement regarding the compulsory establishment of preliminary training schools, i.e. up to January 1, 1950, as has been granted to those hospitals previously recognised as training schools by the Royal Medico-Psychological Association which received provisional recognition by the Council on January 1, 1947, for a period of three years. This was approved. The following hospitals were no longer approved as training schools for nurses for mental diseases: South Side Home, London, S.W.16; Brunswick House, Mistley, Essex. Provisional approval as a complete training school for a period of two years from March 13, 1947, for nurses for mental diseases had been granted to Cumberland and Westmorland Hospital, Carlisle.

The Assistant Nurses Roll

The Assistant Nurses Committee reported that provisional approval for two years as training schools for assistant nurses had been granted to the Barony Hospital, Nantwich, and continuation of approval had been granted to Birmingham Infirmary and, for a further period of two years to North Middlesex County Hospital, Edmonton, and Ashford County Hospital, Staines, Middlesex. The approval of Stoke Mandeville Hospital, Aylesbury, as a complete training school for assistant nurses was withdrawn. It was agreed that the name of 1,216 applicants be entered in the Roll of Assistant Nurses.

A disciplinary case was heard in camera and judgment was postponed for two years, the nurse's name remaining on the Register in the meantime.

NEW MATRON OF ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S HOSPITAL ROCHESTER

Left: Miss L. M. Green, S.R.N., S.C.M., who has been appointed matron of St., Bartholomew's Hospital, Rochester, to succeed Miss J. C. Goudie who is retiring after nearly 20 years' service

Miss Margaret Benson

At the early age of 23, Miss Margaret Benson, one of the nursing staff of Park Hospital, Davyhulme, Urmston, died of pneumonia after a three days' illness. The members of the staff and Miss Benson's many friends will extend sincere sympathy to Miss Benson's parents.

Miss Nancy Britton

IT IS with regret we announce the death of Miss N. Britton, which occurred whilst on release leave from the T.A.N.S. Miss Britton trained at the Middlesex Hospital, and joined the T.A.N.S. in 1940, and had served both at home and overseas.

Miss Catherine Rider

It is with regret we announce the death of Miss Catherine Rider at the age of 84 years. Trained at Stepney, Miss Rider became superintendent nurse (there was no matron) at the Jewish Hospital in Alexandria. In 18[illegible] she was appointed under the Foreign Office as first senior nurse and matron of the British Seamen's Hospital at Smyrna, and it was largely due to her ability and tact that an up-to-date system of trained nursing was achieved there. In 1897 the Foreign Office released Miss Rider temporarily to go as volunteer matron to Greece during the Greco-Turkish war. In 1900 she organized the kitchen and dairy arrangements of the Imperial Yeomanry Branch Military Hospital in Pretoria and on return from South Africa, became acting assistant matron at Lambeth Infirmary. Two years later the Beira and Mashonaland Railways appointed her as matron to the hospital under the Rhodes Colonization Scheme and from this East African appointment Miss Rider returned to the East Riding of Yorkshire as matron of the Nursing Association of that Area, and also organized the East Riding Association of District Nurses till the 1914-1918 war. She finally retired in 1920, and her death is deeply regretted by her many friends and colleagues.

Public Health Central Sectional Committee—

Candidates' Election Policies

MISS C. E. BAUGHAM

S.R.N., S.C.M., Health Visitor's Certificate, Superintendent Health Visitor, Somerset County Council.

If I am elected I shall strive to improve and maintain the function of the health visitor in rural areas. As this work in rural areas differs considerably from that in urban and city areas, I shall endeavour to keep the planning experts aware of this so that in a comprehensive health scheme the proper position of the rural health visitor would be ensured.

MISS A. BROWN

S.R.N., S.C.M., Health Visitor, Queen's Nurse, Inspector, County Nursing Associations, Queen's Institute of District Nursing.

I served on the Central Sectional Committee before leaving this country in 1944 for work as Regional Nursing Officer with the U.N.R.R.A. Mission in Greece. If elected again I hope to continue to work for unification of domiciliary services, proper qualification of personnel employed and the recognition of nurses as chief officers and administrators for their own profession.

MISS E. M. CALIN

S.R.N., S.C.M., Industrial Nursing Certificate. Sister-in-Charge, Courtaulds' Main Works Surgery, Foleshill Road, Coventry.

My policy is to further co-operation between preventive and curative nursing services; I think that employers in industry should recognize the status and qualifications of State-registered nurses, adopt the salary scales recommended by the Royal College of Nursing and give full recognition to the potentialities of the nurse as a teacher and promoter of positive health.

MISS IRENE H. CHARLEY

S.R.N., S.C.M., Health Visitor's Certificate, Superintendent, Central Bureau for Insurance Nursing, Limited.

My policy is to work for a greater understanding in the nursing profession and general public of the work of the public health nursing team. I feel the establishment of a public health nursing department within the Royal College of Nursing is long overdue and its organisation would do much to further public health nursing principles generally. I have followed closely the development of industrial nursing and shall work towards the integration of an industrial nursing service within the National Health Service.

MISS M. E. DAVIES

I believe that all health services should be administered nationally, regionally and locally by one authority, with a department of nursing in each public health department.

I consider :—(1) that the health of the family as a whole, be the responsibility of one public health nurse; (2) that suitable health nurses should be qualified in parentcraft, and recognized as teachers by the Board of Education; (3) that liaison between domiciliary nursing, industrial nursing and public health departments should be encouraged.

MISS E. E. LAYNES

As district nurse I am interested in all types of public health work and would support all constructive plans which would bring greater co-operation between the different services.

MISS MARGARET E. REIDY

S.R.N., Superintendent of Nursing, Slough Industrial Health and Recuperative Service, Farnham Road, Slough, Bucks.

My policy is to support that of the Royal College of Nursing, pressing for a wider basic training which would prepare candidates adequately for specialization in the many spheres of work open to the State-registered nurse to-day; to advocate the extension of refresher courses to meet the needs of all nurses in the public health service; to work for a better understanding throughout the profession and a fuller knowledge of the work of each public health nurse, especially by her colleagues in hospital; and to urge adequate remuneration for all public health nurses.

MANCHESTER ROYAL INFIRMARY PRESENTATION

Miss Jessie Whitfield, home sister of Manchester Royal Infirmary, has resigned after thirty years service to her training school. Nurses wishing to give a donation to Miss Whitfield's presentation are asked to send it as soon as possible to Miss L. G. Duff Grant, Lady Superintendent of Nurses, Manchester Royal Infirmary.

Modern Homes

If you are in London and can spare the time, The Modern Homes Exhibition at Dorland Hall, Lower Regent Street, is well worth a visit. Here are rooms set out with the latest labour-saving devices; and a two-roomed flat is furnished without coupons. The exhibition is open from 10.30 a.m. to 6.30 p.m. until May 24, admission 1s. 0d.

PRIVATE NURSES' SALARIES—A Test Case

THE appeal against the right of the London County Council to fix maximum salaries for private nurses engaged through nurse agencies came before the Clerkenwell Magistrate on March 24 when Mr. Lewis Miller, head of London and District Nursing Association, of Holborn Hall, W.C.—an agent who fixes engagements and pay for over 400 nurses a year—applied for the wage condition to be removed from his renewed licence. Mr. G. R. Blanco White, K.C., who appeared for Mr. Miller, said at the previous hearing that the case was of the greatest importance to the nursing profession, an earlier estimate was that 20,000 nurses were affected by the case. Under the maximum wage limit a trained nurse of 15 years experience would get £5 3s. 10d. a week against £6 1s. received by a bricklayer's labourer.

Mr. Erskine Simes, K.C., appeared for the London County Council. Opening the case for the Council, Mr. Erskine Simes said that Mr. Miller was running a commercial undertaking and that condition was the key to the situation, because it limited the amount that he might charge to nurses to 10 per cent. of the charge under the Council's approved scale. There was no suggestion that 10 per cent. of the scale was inadequate remuneration to the agency for the services it performed. The average salary was £4 a week, and that would give a total salary of £64,000, ten per cent. of which was £6,400. "If that condition was varied and a pound a week extra charged to the clients of the agency," he said, "that would mean anything up to £40 a week extra profit."

Mr. Simes said that the London County Council were under an obligation to pay reasonable salaries on the Rushcliffe Scale. If that varied the scale fixed by the conditions would vary. The scale which was fixed in regard to private nurses working in hospitals had a condition of 50 per cent. above the Rushcliffe Scale for permanent staff in some cases and 30 per cent. in others. "It would be idle to say that the conditions were imposed by the London County Council in order to keep down nurses' wages and prevent competition with salaries which they themselves are paying," he said. "This scale is one which has been agreed on by the employees and representatives of various nursing bodies, and by the Minister of Health. I think the scale submitted was a reasonable one." Mr. Simes said there was nothing to indicate in any way that the discretion of the London County Council had not been properly exercised on a scale which had been fixed by them.

Mr. Bertram Reece, gave his decision at Clerkenwell Magistrates Court in proceedings which are stated to affect the salaries of 20,000 nurses, including 10,000 in London, Mr. Bertram Reece said that in his view certain conditions which the London County Council had attached to the renewal of the licence of a nurses' employment agency were "unreasonable and against the public interest."

Mr. Miller, had been "aggrieved" by five conditions, and in particular by one which imposed a maximum salary scale for nurses obtaining employment through him. It had been urged that the proposed scale was in accordance with the Rushcliffe Scale.

The magistrate said he accepted the contention of Mr. Blanco White, K.C., on behalf of Mr. Miller, that the salary condition and another condition were ultra vires.

"It does not appear to me to be the case that Parliament, within the terms of the Nurses Act, 1943, conferred powers upon an authority to attach to a licence such conditions as those referred to, thereby limiting the remuneration of nurses," said Mr. Reece. Referring to three of the conditions, he said they were unreasonable and against the public interest. In his view, the result was that the appeal succeeded and Mr. Miller was entitled to 125 guineas cost. An appeal was indicated.

INDUSTRIAL NURSES IN CUMBERLAND—a Study Day

A STUDY day for industrial nurses, first aid workers and safety officers, arranged by the West Cumberland Branch of the Royal College of Nursing, was held recently, in the Medical Department of the United Steel Company, Workington, Cumberland. Over one hundred people attended, including matrons, nurses, doctors, safety officers and industrial "first aiders," coming from Dumfries, Penrith, Carlisle and all parts of the county.

The proceedings opened in the works central canteen where the chairman, Miss Barrowman, matron of Whitehaven Hospital, thanked the Company for providing facilities for the conference and Miss Short, sister, and her staff for organizing it. Mr. Langton Highton, general manager and director, replying for the Company, welcomed the delegates and expressed his pleasure in meeting the members of the Royal College of Nursing including Miss Simpson, industrial nursing tutor, Miss Durrant of London and Miss G. Zachariah of India. It was interesting to note he said that it was from the Workington Iron and Steel Company that the first Englishman was sent to start the Tara Iron and Steel Works of Jamshedpur, India, 38 years ago and to these Works Miss Zachariah had been appointed as the first industrial nurse.

The first speaker was Dr. J. G. Craw, director and organizer of Whitehaven Hospitals Rehabilitation Centre. He spoke on Accident Services in Relation to Industry. He made a survey of industrial hazards, especially mining hazards, and showed the progression of events leading up to the medical services for industry to-day. Dr. Craw stressed the need for a proper selection of personnel for the different types of work, the necessity for periodic examination of workers to detect early signs of disease, the requirements for teaching positive health measures and most important, the all-prevailing importance of good engineering hygiene.

The next speaker, Mr. C. Kay, coke ovens works manager, introduced his subject, Coal and its Many By-Products, by outlining the history of coke oven practise. After a preliminary talk the company was divided up into parties of fifteen, each with its guide and "first-aider," and a tour was made of the plant, including the by-product section. The tour ended in the exhibition room where samples of the by-products were on view and one member was heard to exclaim with amazement that coal was able to feed, clothe, clean and destroy you. Among the exhibits were samples of sulphate and nitrate of ammonia, benzene, sulphanilimide drugs, D.D.T., saccharine, perfumes, synthetic rubber, nylon, toluene and napthalene.

Following the tour tea was served in the works canteen at the kind invitation of the management. Votes of thanks to the speakers were proposed and seconded by Miss Short and Miss Phillipson, and, on behalf of the visitors, to the Company and to Mr. Highton, by Miss Simpson and Miss Durant.

In Parliament

Recently in the House of Commons, Mr. Sorenson asked the Minister of Health approximately how many girls of 16 years of age and under had been engaged for nursing duties by public authorities; and what advice regarding the employment of young girls for this purpose had been given to public authorities responsible for hospitals and similar institutions.

Mr. L. J. Edwards, Parliamentary Secretary to the Ministry of Health, said that figures were not available, but the practice was not widespread. The Athlone Committee recommended that no girl under 17 should be employed in hospital wards. The Committee's report was brought to the attention of local authorities.

Mr. Sorenson: Is my honourable friend aware that in some areas quite a number of these young girls under 16 years of age are employed by public authorities, and can he do nothing to see that they are not given unsuitable or too hard jobs?

Mr. Edwards: I deprecate the practice, and the Minister's view has been brought to the notice of local authorities.

Mrs. Leah Manning: My honourable friend says he has not got the figures. Would he mind trying to obtain them, because he would find out that the practice is widespread in these days when it is difficult to get nurses? These girls ought not to be seeing the unsuitable and distressing sights to which some of them are subjected.

Mr. Hector Hughes: Can the Parliamentary Secretary say whether these young girls are given any training to fit them to become qualified nurses, or are they simply in blind alley jobs?

Mr. Edwards: That is an entirely different question. The point is that it is not desirable for girls of this age to be employed in hospitals.

Sir J. Lucas asked the Secretary of State for the Colonies why fully qualified auxiliary nursing sisters in Hong Kong, who were given a contract for the duration of the war, were only receiving three months' pay for the period of their internment; and whether, in view of this contract, he would see that they received their full pay.

Mr. Creech Jones said that three months' salary was the minimum amount paid to women members of the Civil Defence Services in Hong Kong who were not normally dependent on their earnings; where a woman could show that she was so dependent (and this would include the case of a nurse who was in private employment before joining the auxiliary nursing service) an application for more liberal treatment would receive consideration. He was not previously aware that these persons were given contracts of service for the duration of the war, but he was advised that temporary engagements of this nature must be regarded as having been terminated on the Japanese occupation.

Important Summer Conference

The National Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis is arranging a Conference on Tuberculosis in London, from July 8-10. It is to be called The British Commonwealth and Empire Health and Tuberculosis Conference and is open to both doctors and laymen from this country and overseas, and plans are being made for overseas guests to see something of the anti-tuberculosis work in this country. The Minister of Health, the Rt. Hon. Aneurin Bevan, M.P., has promised to attend on the first day of the meeting, and to speak on the subject of tuberculosis and the National Health Service Act. Further particulars may be obtained from the Secretary General, National Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis, Tavistock House North, Tavistock Square, W.C.1.

Correspondence

A Need for Unity

Those of us who have done general work in rural areas know that the majority of general practitioners are our friends. We have rarely met the non-co-operative or luke-warm type described in your March 15 issue by "Anon." Most doctors are glad to have their health teaching corroborated by their nursing colleagues. There is no question of conflict. Such teaching is an integral part of nursing. The dressing of a festering wound, without advice on diet and habits, or attention to the patient's mental state, would be a mere palliative. In cases where a special diet is indicated the nurse consults the doctor to ascertain his wishes and ensure that they are carried out.

On page 10 of the "Handbook for Queen's Nurses" under "Rules laid down" we find:—"The nurse shall not dispense for her patients any such drugs as should only be prescribed by a medical practitioner. This rule does not, of course, bind the Queen's Nursing Sister when she is acting in her capacity as a midwife." Clearly then, the prospectus referred to in the same letter, meant carrying out the doctor's orders.

Regarding the statement "a family teaching service can be left to the health services in general," does "Anon" not realize that midwives and district nurses are admitted to the Public Health Section of the Royal College of Nursing, that many Queen's Nursing Sisters are qualified health visitors, and that the Ministry of Health has approved the Queen's Institute of District Nursing to train health visitors? In many rural and urban districts Queen's Nursing Sisters are appointed by medical officers of health to carry out the public health work, including midwifery and general nursing. Even in the cities, they form part of a great team of workers, striving to raise the standard of the nation's health.

There are many challenges to our profession to-day. Certain sections of the community are openly stating that we should have little say in matters of policy and planning. One hears that nurses should not administrate in nursing work. Are we going to lend ourselves to those who would "divide and rule" us? Surely at this critical time in nursing history, we should rise above petty differences within our ranks, join the Royal College of Nursing and the College of Midwives in strength, and present a united front to all outside influences which may prove detrimental to our work and therefore to the public which needs the best possible comprehensive public health service.

R. WATSON,
Assistant Education Officer,
Queen's Institute of District Nursing.

Student or Employee?

In her leading article of February 15, the Editor asks for suggestions from readers on the above subject and, as a keen advocate of student status for student nurses, I am glad to respond to the invitation.

The writer to The Lancet, quoted in the article, has suggested that the desire for student status comes from hospital authorities anxious to keep their costs low, and seems to think that the fact of receiving less or no salary would, by itself, confer student status on the student nurse. This is, indeed, a curious point of view, as by this action alone, the nurse in training would still be an employee, but an under-paid one, and no nearer student status at all.

In spite of the welcome change of title from "probationer" to "student nurse," now so generally adopted, the nurse in training is still regarded mainly as an employee. A fundamental change of outlook, with a bold, long-term view is needed if we are to build up a really sufficient and efficient national nursing service. Propaganda directed at potential student nurses which over-emphasises the immediate financial and material advantages of entering the nursing service is evidently not producing the quality or quantity of recruits required, and this is not surprising. So many attracted by this form of propaganda would join the ranks not necessarily from any desire to make nursing their professional career, but as a means of temporary livelihood offering as good conditions of employment as other work at similar rates of pay; many such recruits would not complete their training, and probably would never intend to do so, and must be a continual source of wastage.

The short-term view on which this propaganda is based, over-shadowed by the desperate need of hospital staffs for "pairs of hands," has, in fact, resulted in bribing recruits into the service, undermining student status and inevitably producing a high wastage rate.

A sound, long-term view visualising real student status for the student nurse would produce a basis for propaganda which would attract girls seeking a professional career rather than immediate employment.

Meanwhile, what might be adopted as an alternative short-term policy to ease the now serious difficulties of hospital staffing and give a long-term plan time to develop? I suggest as a fundamental approach to the problem that the present insufficiency of nurse "manpower" be regarded as a temporary emergency, and that accordingly emergency and temporary measures be taken to meet it, designed not to interfere with long-term planning for the training of student nurses, and depending on them very much less than under the existing system for routine nursing and domestic duties.

The mobilization of part-time nurses that has been carried out so successfully in some areas is an important step in such a policy, and the employment of non-British nurses another. A further step would be to seek the co-operation of both the British Red Cross Society and the Order of St. John for large scale mobilization of their members throughout the country for regular part-time nursing and/or domestic work in hospitals.

It is not within the scope of this letter to make suggestions in detail with regard to a long-term policy, and I will only submit a few main ideas.

If correct student status for student nurses is to be achieved this long-term policy must surely be based on a fundamental conception of nurse training as the concern primarily of the Education rather than the Employing authorities. To establish and guarantee this principle, a department of nursing might well be set up within the Ministry of Education; this department would work closely with the Royal College of Nursing and the King Edward Recruitment Centre to delegate wide powers and recommend substantial grants to both these bodies for the extension of their work. Official responsibility for the recruitment and education of student nurses would devolve on this department, and the nursing departments of the Ministry of Health and Ministry of Labour would be free to concentrate on the recruitment and organization of a trained national nursing service.

To establish further the educational principle, Schools of Nursing might become independent financial units supported by central and local government grants and student fees (scholarships and bursaries being available for students unable to afford the fees); the block system to be adopted and student nurses paid according to the Rushcliffe Scale for their services while undergoing practical training sessions in hospital. Although the greater part, or possibly all, her salary would be paid to the school in fees, the student would feel she had earned those fees, also a guarantee that she would receive systematic practical, as well as theoretical training, as ward sister tutors would be provided by the school to supervise her practical training in the wards.

The provision of ward sister tutors should be a most important feature of long-term planning, as they would be the "liaison officers" between the school and the administrative ward sisters, whom they would relieve of teaching duties and leave entirely free to supervise the care of their patients.

The announcement that the Council of the Royal College of Nursing have decided, if possible, to set up a University School of Nursing is welcome news, as a necessary preliminary to successful long-term planning must be a sufficiency of well trained teachers of nursing.

Parents provide fees and pocket money for daughters who take up medicine or, for instance, physiotherapy, as a career. Why should they not also provide, at any rate, pocket money for the daughter who takes up nursing as a career? The nursing service is, we understand, to be nationalized: in that case let our long-term planning demand a fair proportion of the national budget towards the sound education of the student nurse.

MARJORIE M. KILLBY, S.R.N.

Nasal Feeding Techniques

It is always to our advantage to have available alternative methods for performing the commoner clinical manoeuvres with which we meet in daily practice. With this end in view, I would like to note a very simple method by which fluids and semi-solids may be introduced into the narrow Ryle's tube used for nasal feeding.

It is the common practice to use a metal or glass funnel which is connected, by a series of graduated tubes, to the Ryle's tube. This can be cumbersome and it must be the experience of all of us that we often have difficulty in procuring the necessary connecting tubes.

This was amply demonstrated to me recently when nasal feeding was required in a case of head-injury with coma. I was unable to obtain the necessary graduated tubes for connecting the wide funnel to a narrow Ryle's tube. An undine, however, was readily available and the narrow, tapering spout of this vessel admirably fitted the nasal tube. No intermediate connections are required. It was found that all liquids and such semi-solids as egg-flip passed easily through the undine and oral sulphonamide was also administered by this route.

Should your readers experience difficulty in acquiring a funnel and its attendant connecting pieces in such cases, I can commend the simple alternative as both practicable and effective.

Captain, R.A.M.C.,
Combined Military Hospital,
India Command.

PRESENTATION

AFTER 30 years' service at Barking and Upney Hospitals, Miss M. W. Hedgcock, the matron, is retiring. A large audience was present when Miss Hedgcock received an illuminated address and cheque. In her reply Miss Hedgcock said that she had loved her work at Barking and the people of Barking, and she was most grateful that her friends and colleagues had conferred such an honour on her. The staff afterwards gave a party to Miss Hedgcock, at which there was a fancy dress parade.

Public Health Section

Quarterly Meeting

The Public Health Section quarterly meeting will be held on Saturday, April 26, at 2.30 p.m., at the Guildhall, East Gate, Gloucester.

Public Health Section within the London Branch.—The Tuberculosis Visitors, Health Visitors, and School Nurses' Discussion Group will meet on Monday, April 21, at 6.30 p.m., in the Royal College of Nursing—the subject for the discussion being "The Curtis Report."

Private Nurses Section

Private Nurses' Section Within the Bristol Branch.—A general meeting was held on March 27, at the Walker Dunbar Hospital. Miss Adams, the Western Area organizer, was present, and Miss Brown-Fowler was in the chair.

Branch Reports

Blackpool and District Branch.—There will be a meeting on April 14 at 7 p.m., at the Victoria Hospital, Blackpool, to hear the delegates' report of the Conference in London and to discuss the agenda of the Branches Standing Committee.

Border Counties Branch.—A meeting was held on March 29 in the Royal Hotel, Galashiels. Miss White, the new Area Organizer for Scotland, was present. Miss Morrison gave a very full report on her visit to the recent conference held in London. Miss D. Brown who has been secretary of the Branch for eleven years, has resigned, and Miss E. K. Cockburn is now honorary secretary. Mrs. Wilson, president, has also resigned. Miss Mathieson was elected chairman.

Glasgow Branch.—Members enjoyed a pleasant and instructive evening when they met in Stobhill Hospital on March 19. Dr. Anne MacAllister gave an interesting talk on Speech Therapy. A general meeting was held on March 25, in the Scottish Nurses' Club, when resolutions for the forthcoming Branches' Standing Committee were discussed.

Oxford Branch.—At the annual general meeting on February 24 in the Painted Room, the following honorary officers were elected: President—Miss Preddy; vice-presidents—Professor W. A. Ellis, Mrs. C. K. Allen, Mrs. J. Lowe, and Mrs. J. C. Riddell; chairman—Miss J. MacDonell; secretary—Miss Field; assistant secretary—Miss Beckley; treasurer—Miss Garstang; executive committee—Miss Brown, Miss Goode, Miss Selvery, Miss Beckett Wood, Miss Thompson, Miss Weiss and Miss Wickham. The monthly meeting was held on March 24 at the Ackland Nursing Home. A talk on all types of insurance was given by Mr. McMath of the Eagle Star Insurance Company, who demonstrated very clearly the advantages conceded to members taking a policy through the Royal College of Nursing.

Plymouth and District Branch.—There will be an Executive Committee Meeting on Tuesday, April 15, at 7 p.m., at the City Isolation Hospital, followed by a General Meeting at 7.30 p.m., to discuss the agenda for the Branches' Standing Committee and to nominate a chairman for the Branches' Standing Committee. A Bring and Buy Sale and a Jumble Sale with be held on Saturday, April 19 at the Three Towns Nursing Association, 77, Durnford Street, at 2.30 p.m. Refreshments at moderate cost. Please help. The proceeds of the sale are for the Branch funds. Please send your gifts to Miss D. M. Williams or the Hon. Secretary, and come yourself on Saturday, April 19.

Stockton-on-Tees Branch.—A dinner was held on March 27 to celebrate the 21st birthday of the Branch. Among the guests were the Mayor and Mayoress of Stockton. A toast to the King was proposed by Miss E. Gardner, secretary. The Mayor proposed a toast to the Royal College of nursing and the branch, and Miss Montgomery, Northern Area Organizer responded. Miss Marshall, chairman, proposed the toast to the guests and Dr. H. Peters, medical officer of health for Stockton, responded.

"Iodine Facts"

THE prevalence of goitre in certain areas in practically every country in the world is one of those facts that are accepted with something almost like indifference. In 1944 it was estimated that there were some half a million cases of thyroid enlargement in England and Wales in persons between the ages of five and twenty years inclusive. To arouse interest and to stir into action the public, particularly the official mind, the Iodine Educational Bureau, maintained by the Chilean iodine producers, issues from time to time Iodine Facts. The volume of Facts 271—380 can now be obtained from Stone House, Bishopsgate, E.C.2. Within its pages a great deal of useful information can be learned with respect to the world-wide prevalence and prevention of goitre. That hypertrophy of the thyroid can be prevented by taking a small quantity of iodized salt daily by everybody residing in those areas where goitre is prevalent is known to medical science. As a matter of fact the Goitre Sub-Committee of the Medical Research Council urged, more than two years ago, that, as a matter of national policy, a trace of iodine should be added to all the common salt consumed in the British Isles. For many years past this method of prophylaxis has been adopted officially in the United States, Switzerland, New Zealand, and some other countries with the happy result of a reduction in the number of cases of goitre therein. A glance at the map of the world showing the various "goitre areas" is sufficient to indicate the wisdom of such a practice. Fact 323 is interesting on account of the revelation that prolonged cabbage-feeding in rabbits can produce thyroid enlargement. There is a good account of the beneficial effect of thiouracil in thyrotoxicosis. As Fact 271 states: "A world freed from goitre would, indeed, be an advancement in liberation . . . for all mankind."

News in Brief

New School Medical and Dental Forms

THE Ministry of Education has approved new forms for the purpose of keeping school medical and dental records. They are Forms 10M., 10aM., and 11M.

Berkshire Part-time Experiment

THE matron of the Royal Berkshire Hospital, Miss K. I. Cawood, is having one ward staffed by part time nurses only because of difficulty of accommodation. If this proves successful, a second ward will be similarly staffed.

Gift of Radium

THE EXECUTORS of the late Mr. Fred Kershaw have handed over to Bolton Royal Infirmary a bequest of £24,000 for the purchase of four grammes of radium.

Australian Gratitude

Two Chinese nurses from Singapore are due to arrive shortly in Melbourne as the first holders of the Australian Imperial Forces Malayan nursing scholarships. The nurses will spend two years in Australia which has subscribed to this scheme as an acknowledgement of its debt to Malayan Chinese for kindnesses received during the war.

The Regimental Sergeant-Major Steps In

MR. Gerald Pascoe, an ex-regimental sergeant-major, has answered the appeal of the Newquay Hospital, Cornwall, and goes to work in the childrens' ward from 5—9 p.m. The hospital will have to close unless other volunteers come forward to assist both the nursing and domestic staffs.

Hospitals Co-operate

A NEW scheme of co-operation will shortly come into operation between the Prince of Wales General Hospital, N.15, and the Bearsted Memorial Hospital, a voluntary maternity hospital with new buildings almost completed at Stoke Newington.

East Ham District Nursing Association

To Czech Sanatoria

DETAILS are being discussed of a plan to allow British ex-Service men to recuperate in Czechoslovak sanatoria.

NURSES' APPEAL FOR NURSES

Nation's Fund for Nurses

To continue quoting from the original Appeal issued by the Royal College of Nursing, the last paragraph reads as follows :—

"We ask our fellow nurses therefore, to assist the Fund to find the ready money to allay anxiety and help to speed up a sufferer's recovery, and so we ask you not only to help in little ways yourselves, but to make the Fund still more widely known among people who can help in bigger ways—for instance, establishing pensions and the like. Various suggestions will occur to you, and the habit of allocating a small percentage of the profits of any undertaking to the Appeal is a sound and painless one." Please help this very urgent need as much as possible.

Your own—and your patient's—skin needs

Skin needs Nivea Creme to keep it soft, smooth and supple. Nivea Creme puts back into the skin the natural lubricating elements that are lost by constant washing and frequent contact with antiseptic fluid; and by the drying effects of wind and sun. Nivea is different from other creams. It contains "Eucerite," the unique ingredient that possesses the closest resemblance to the skin's natural oils. Nivea therefore has the unusual quality of being able to penetrate the skin surface and nourish the tissues beneath. You can use and recommend Nivea for many purposes.

- A powder and make-up base.
- A cleansing and night cream.
- Relieves sun and wind burn.
- Soothes chapped rough hands.
- Prevents babies' napkin rash.

PREGNANCY:

THE IMPORTANCE OF ADEQUATE VITAMIN INTAKE

The vitamin content of the diet during gestation is of importance both to the mother and the nutrition of the fœtus. It also exerts specific action on the quality and supply of the breast milk.

During pregnancy, therefore, a diet augmented by vitamins and minerals not only enables the mother to supply these essentials for growth to the fœtus but also ensures an adequate supply of rich, nourishing breast milk during the lactation period.

For these reasons two 'Supavite' capsules should be taken daily by the expectant mother. 'Supavite' contains vitamins A, $B_1$, $B_2$(G), C, D, E with calcium, iron and phosphorus in a scientifically balanced form which provides a valuable source of vitality throughout the period of pregnancy.

A NEW WAY to reduce infant skin irritations

Johnson's

BABY LOTION

LABORATORY and clinical tests indicate that Johnson's new Baby Lotion is an important step forward in infant skin care. It's a white, antiseptic lotion for cleansing and soothing that leaves a discontinuous oil film on the skin. This is because Baby Lotion is an oil-in-water emulsion, homogenised under pressure to provide the extreme dispersion of oil in micron-size globules. This property contributes to normal skin functioning, permitting normal heat radiation and allowing perspiration to escape readily. Johnson's Baby Lotion, therefore, helps to prevent heat rash and skin irritations.
